FAQ'S

WHAT IS AN ABDOMINAL ULTRASOUND?

An abdominal ultrasound exam is performed as a way to non-invasively look inside an animal's body and visualize the internal structures.

It uses sound waves to examine internal organs and structures for location, size, shape, texture and blood supply, as well as check for any abnormal structures or changes.

WHAT HAPPENS TO MY ANIMAL DURING AN ULTRASOUND EXAM

Your pet will have their abdomen shaved in order to allow for optimal imaging.

They will be laid on their side and held by 1-2 technicians while their ultrasound exam is being performed. Their comfort and safety is our highest priority.

WILL MY PET BE SEDATED?

As you can imagine, having a pet stay still to allow for imaging can be challenging (if we could just talk to them and tell them its not going to hurt and it'll be over soon!)

We routinely perform ultrasounds with little to no sedation, however sometimes additional sedation is needed to allow for optimal imaging and comfort of your pet.

WHAT HAPPENS AFTER THE ULTRASOUND EXAM?

After the ultrasound, the imaging along with your pet's history and any other diagnostics (radiographs, lab work) will be sent for a telemedicine consult.

Once the case is interpreted, a full written report will be available to help aid in the care of your pet.
